On the ocean side of Daytona is Seabreeze, with another Congregational church, founded with missionary money but now self-supporting. An inviting road runs south from Daytona, and with the scent of the salt water in his nostrils the autoist Smyrna, where Congregationalism is centered in a community church. Now turn west and follow a smooth country road for twenty-one miles to Lake Winnemisett, then south three miles to Lake Helen, where in a fine citrus country we have a church which still leans slightly upon the Home Missionary Society. Back again to the lake and on west four miles and the tourist comes to Deland, the seat of Stetson University. Here the road turns south again, and after swinging along five miles over its smooth surface we strike another church of ours at Orange City. The trail leads south across the St...
